Lincoln Estates School Election Defeated By 8 Votes

At the elections for consolidating school Districts 156 and 156A in Lincoln Estates held last Saturday the proposition lost by 8 votes.

In the Ann Rutledge district of 156 it is estimated 90 percent of the voters voted without a dissenting vote. In the Gatter school 156A the estimate is that 95 percent of the citizens voted as follows: 44 against, and 36 for the merger making a total of 8 votes against the proposition. By combining the 61 votes in District 156 and 36 votes in district 156A vote for the merger, a total of 97 votes were cast. But it was necessary to have the majority for the merger in both districts in order to carry the proposition.

The News-Bulletin has been informed that a try will be made again for the merger. We have been informed that taxes in district 156A which was against the merger will be increased in order to meet the expenditures of maintaining that school. Those for the merger state that only good for the whole community was intended by supporting the consolidation.

As has been stated many times during the past year in numerous ways the State of Illinois is conducting a survey of all one room rural school houses in order to carry out consolidation of nearby schools in that classification. It is said that the government will more than likely cause the merging of these two schools within a year.

Frankfort Boy In Truck-Thresher Accident

Last Saturday, after finishing threshing oats at the farm of their uncle, Mr. Chas. Mark, Clinton and Milton Mark were driving home, going south on route 45 in Green Garden, Clinton driving a team of horses and Milton following on a tractor to which a threshing machine was hooked. When Milton neared the driveway to his farm home where he was to turn east, a large truck side-swiped him, upsetting the threshing machine and tractor and pinning him beneath it.

The driver of the truck was Ralph Maglin, 21 of Wolf Lake, Ill., who was returning from Waukegan, Ill., with an empty truck going to Anna, Ill. where the truck owner lives.

Passing motorists notified the family who came to Milton's aid at once but he was beyond human help.

Deputy Coroner Gerald Dames, who responded to the call, said he believed the young man was killed instantly as his neck was broken.

Funeral services were held in the Frankfort Methodist church Tuesday afternoon with the pastor, Rev. Lloyd Coleman officiating. The church and parlors and lower room were filled to capacity with those who came to pay respects to a fine young man. The flowers were lovely and profuse. Dr. and Mrs. Faulkner of Manhattan sang, "In The Garden" and "What A Friend We Have In Jesus". Burial was made in Rose Hill cemetery in Green Garden.

The young man, who was 16 years old, is survived by his mother, Mrs. Amanda Mark and his brother, with whom he had been operating the 80 acre farm with their mother since the death of their father, Mr. George Mark in 1939. Also surviving is his grandmother, Mrs. Emma Gierke and many other relatives and friends.

JESUS AND THE SABBATH

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:8; Mark 2:27-28; Matthew 12:1-13.
MEMORY SELECTION—This is the day which the Lord hath made; we will rejoice and be glad in it.—Psalm 118:24.

"The Sabbath was made for man," and was ordained of God for the good of man's body and soul. It was intended to be a day of glad fellowship with the Lord.

Since the Sabbath—the seventh day—was essentially one of rest and worship, the principles which surrounded it and directed its life may be applied to our day of rest, which is the first day of the week—the Lord's day.

That word "rest" sounds a little strange in this busy world of ours, and yet it is an important one. It means quiet for the struggling one, calm for the troubled, repose for the weary, cessation of labor for the worn-out one.

God in his infinite wisdom saw that without rest man would soon destroy himself, and he made provision for one day in seven when labor should cease and man should be free for that recreation of soul and body which should fit him for the labor of the week.

I. A Day of Holiness (Exod. 20:8).

God gave his people a holy day to balance up their days of labor and to bring blessing to their souls. On that day he decreed that they should come apart from their labors, turn from secular interest and turn their hearts and minds to the unseen and the eternal. Man would become so engrossed in the things of this world that he would soon forget; therefore, God commands him to stop and worship. That should be sufficient to cause his people to "remember" the day "to keep it holy."

Notice that the day of rest was to be not only for the family, but also for servants and for visitors. The employer who unnecessarily operates his factory or office on Sunday violates this commandment. Note also that the man who is to rest on the seventh day is supposed to work on the six days. Some neglect to do both.

This matter of keeping the Lord's day holy is one which has tremendous implications in the lives of our children. Many men and women who have had built into their own characters the stalwart virtues nurtured by family attendance at divine worship have not only forgotten their own continuing need, but are destroying the interest of their children in church attendance.

It is serious enough to go astray in one's own life, but to lead one's children astray is an appalling responsibility. Let's keep the Lord's day as a holy day.

II. A Day of Helpfulness (Mark 2:23-28).

The formalists of Christ's day, the Pharisees, had overlooked the heart of God's law and the holy living which it was intended to produce, and had bound up even the observance of the sabbath (which was intended to be a day of rest and gladness) in such a mass of technical "thou shalt not's" that it was a day of fear.

The accusations against the disciples because they had taken and eaten grain was not on the ground that they had stolen, for the law (Deut. 23:25) guaranteed that right to the one who passed through his neighbor's field. The Pharisees contended, however, that the disciples had worked on the Sabbath in picking and hulling the grain.

God's laws are helpful laws, and it is only when men pervert them, or add to them their own traditions and interpretations, that they become burdensome to anyone who is God-fearing and obedient.

III. A Day of Healing (Matt. 12:9-13).

Jesus made it clear that healing of the body (yes, and of the soul) was most appropriate on the Sabbath day; in fact, that is the very day for it.

The healing of the man with the withered arm revealed that back of the Pharisees' professed concern for the Sabbath was a real hatred for Christ. It is an appalling thing that in the house of worship on the very Sabbath day, these men, outwardly so religious, were plotting against our Lord.

Jesus cuts across human hypocrisy and hatred to declare that the true keeping of the Sabbath is to do the work of God. No work of necessity (like plucking the grain) or of mercy (like healing the withered arm) is ever out of place on the day of rest.

A word of caution is needed, for some have sought to interpret this Scripture as providing biblical ground for doing all sorts of things on their day of rest. That day is for man's good, not for his destruction. His greatest good is served by rest, worship, spiritual development, Christian fellowship, and the doing of deeds of necessity and mercy.

The desecration of the Lord's day in our time is a serious matter. Let us not contribute to it.

Cattle Brucellosis Checking Possible

Testing of Cattle Eradicates Disease

There was a further increase in brucellosis last year, according to the American Foundation for Animal Health, and the increase in the incidence of the disease practically doubled in the last five years.

Continued testing and retesting of our cattle herds is the mainstay of the nation's fight to eradicate this costly problem, as shown by the sharp increase it has made during the time when there were not sufficient veterinarians available to carry on with the testing program.

Altogether too many farmers in recent years, have come to look upon vaccination as an easy answer to brucellosis control. Vaccination is highly desirable, but it should always be looked upon as an important adjunct, not a replacement of the testing program.

With the recent return of thousands of veterinarians from military service, livestock health authorities have expressed hope that the sharp wartime upswing in cattle brucellosis may be checked in the early future.

Know Your Breed Holstein

By W. J. DRYDEN

The first importation of Holstein to be established permanently in the United States was made by Winthrop W. Chenery at Belmont, Mass. in 1857.

The breed traces back before the beginning of the Christian era. The breed known as the Holstein-Friesian had its beginning in the Netherlands.

There are now in the United States nearly as many purebred Holsteins as all other dairy breeds combined. Many world champion milk and butter producers are to be found among the breed.

Guard Rail for Pigs

To decrease the large number of litter pigs killed by the sow stepping or rolling over on them, the guard rail arrangement in farrowing house taken at Texas station has proven satisfactory.

Easy to construct from lumber found around the farm, it will aid in preventing the heavy toll in the farrowing house.

Horn Medicine Funnel

Administering liquid medicine to livestock is dangerous when a glass bottle is used. The accompanying drawing shows a funnel which can be made out of a cow horn. First boil and clean out, then saw off about an inch from the tip and drill into the natural cavity.

Ladino Clover Proven Valuable for Pasture

Ladino clover, the giant form of common white clover, is showing considerable value as a pasture crop. High in protein, minerals and vitamins and low in fiber it is much valued as a feed. Ladino is aggressive under favorable conditions and retards most weeds and many undesirable grasses. Being a perennial of medium long life and of value in soil improvement it will prove valuable on many farms.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

TREASURE OF THE SEA

BY George E. Wahl

W.N.U. Release

THE STORY THUS FAR:

After being adrift for four days on a raft, Dick Jordan is picked up by a small sailing vessel in the Caribbean sea. The captain is named Tucu, an evil-looking half-breed. Dick realizes that he is among men who are little more than pirates. He invents a story of some smuggled jewels, to gain time. He tells Tucu that these jewels are attached to a float near the sunken steamer. On the way to the area where the steamer lies, they sight a derelict schooner. Tucu changes the course to meet it. When they come close to the drifting vessel, a man appears on the deck and shouts to them in a demented manner.

CHAPTER III

"Crazy!" muttered Captain Tucu. "Left alone, an' gone crazy. Pull away!" he added, addressing the Caribs at the oars.

The boat started in the direction of the schooner, but it hadn't covered a quarter of the distance when another figure appeared on the deck. If the sight of the old man had surprised the boarding crew, the second apparition—for it seemed like an apparition to many, certainly to Dick Jordan on the deck of the lugger—created amazement and consternation.

The newcomer was a woman, lightly clad, and with her hair streaming down her shoulders and back, half way to her waist. She had the appearance of one who has been interrupted in the midst of her toilet, rushing on deck to ascertain the meaning of the commotion. She glanced in the direction of the lugger, shading her eyes with one hand, and then back at the old man on the deck. She spoke to him in a low voice, which he heeded, for he withdrew from sight, and permitted her to do the talking.

"What boat is that?" she asked in a clear, bell-like voice.

Tucu hesitated for a moment before replying; then in his most persuasive voice, he informed her: "The San Miguel, Of Limon."

The girl or young woman—it was difficult to estimate her age at the distance, but to Dick she seemed young and comely—seemed in doubt, hesitating before replying; but her eyes were busy studying the boat's crew and the lines of the lugger. Finally, as if she had made up her mind, she retorted in a sharp, peremptory way:

"Well, what do you want? You can't come aboard!"

Captain Tucu smiled a bit craftily. "We took her for a derelict—abandoned."

"You can see now she isn't," replied the girl quickly. Then, as if anxious to pacify them, she added in a pleasant voice: "Thank you for coming; but we don't need any help. We can manage."

Tucu was a little nonplussed, but the grin hadn't left his ugly face. "Y'can't get into port with that wreck. We'll help y'er rig her up."

"No, thank you," was the cool retort. "We can manage."

The small boat had been drifting nearer all the time, and as if alarmed by this the girl added sharper than before: "Keep away, please! You'll get tangled in the wreckage."

Tucu turned to his mate and exchanged a few words with him, and then addressed the girl again: "Who's that old man aboard?"

She drew herself up and frowned. "You mean my father, Captain Bedford?"

"Is he cap'n?" There was a smile of derision on his face, which the girl caught. Resenting it, she nodded curtly, and said:

"Yes! Now if you have no further business here, go back to your own ship."

"I'd like to speak to the cap'n," was the cool retort, motioning to the Caribs to dip their oars again.

"You can't!" was the frightened reply. "He's not well, and has gone below."

Dick Goes to Aid Of a Brave Girl

Dick caught the note of alarm in the voice. He gave a start and glanced around him. The handful of Caribs left on the lugger were grouped forward, intently interested in the schooner and the conversation going on between the skipper and the girl. No one paid the least attention to him.

"If Tucu goes aboard," he muttered under his breath, "I'll go too."

After more talk Tucu and his crew made fast to the schooner and prepared to climb aboard. "Stop!" she cried. "I forbid you coming aboard!"

"My father's not responsible for what he says," she cut in sharply. "I'm in command here, and I forbid—"

Dick didn't hear the finish of the sentence. He had quietly dropped over the stern of the lugger, and was once more battling with his old enemy—the sea.

Swimming slowly, with his head low down in the water, and making a wide detour around the stern of the derelict, Dick reached it without attracting attention. Nobody on the lugger had noticed his departure, and those aboard the schooner were too interested in their prize to give heed to anything else.

Dick climbed up the rigging hanging over the side opposite the lugger, ger, and secured a firm grip on the deck rail with both hands. Tucu and his men were still forward, arguing with the girl. Dick could hear her high-pitched voice raised in remonstrance.

"If you put a foot on this deck, I'll shoot!" she was saying. "The law allows it. You're boarding my ship against my will."

Dick thrust his head above the rail. The men hadn't reached the deck yet, but were hanging over the side, with heads in view. The girl was facing them, with a defiant glitter in her eyes, and an ugly-looking automatic in one hand.

Tucu saw it and hesitated. Ordinarily he would break a woman with as little compunction as he would a dog, and ride roughshod over her opposition; but the one facing him was no ordinary creature. She was cool and collected, pointing a gun at his heart with a hand that did not tremble.

"Y'father asked us aboard, lady," Tucu replied after a pause, an insinuating pleasantry in his voice, "an' we come because o' that. Where's he gone?"

"I told you I was in command here," was the short, curt reply. "That's sufficient. Now get back!"

Tucu glanced aft and then forward. "Where's the crew?" he asked, smiling.

Then, as if drawn by common impulse, they turned and gazed at each other.

The girl woman paled slightly through her tan, but answered hesitatingly: "There's no crew aboard. No one but father and me. Now you know the truth."

It was a bold challenge, delivered in a voice that never quavered. Dick smiled his admiration. She was capable of handling the situation. He made a bet with himself that she would force the men back through sheer will power and bravado.

But neither the girl nor Dick had figured upon the craftiness of old Tucu. Anticipating some such hold-up, the half breed had been playing for time until two of his men could work unobserved along the side of the schooner and climb up the rigging back of the girl. Neither of them was aware of this until her father, the demented skipper of the schooner, suddenly turned up again and announced his presence with glee. He had seen the two Caribs crawling up and instead of repelling them he rushed to offer assistance.

Captain Bedford Babbles Too Much

"Come aboard, mates!" he cried. "I'll help ye. It's a great prize I've picked up—so much money that I don't know what to do with it. Come aboard, an' I'll show ye."

The game was up. The girl turned a horrified gaze at her father, and then swung back again just in time to see Tucu make a leap for the deck. As if determined to punish him for his audacity, she opened fire at short range. With a growl of pain, the half breed dropped to the deck, with one arm limp and useless.

"Damn her. Break her neck, Burley!" he growled.

But Black Burley had no intention of facing the gun pointed at him now. He dropped out of sight behind the bulwark, crowding those back of him into the water.

She would have driven them into their boat at the point of her gun if the two, helped on deck by the old skipper, had not attacked in the rear. When she saw them running toward her she gave a little cry of alarm, and for the first time seemed to lose her nerve.

Tucu raised his voice at the two Caribs, urging them to the flank attack. The crash of the pistol had evidently stunned Captain Bedford, for he stood helpless and amazed with mouth wide open.

Dick at this juncture decided to cast his lot in with the girl. The two Caribs had to pass close to him. When the first came abreast of his hiding place, he shot out a leg and tripped him. The second partly stumbled over the first. Quick as a flash Dick landed a blow with his fist on the point of the man's jaw, and completed the fall.

Both were armed with long curved knives that for ugliness could not be beaten. Before either could recover from his surprise, he relieved them of their weapons. Then giving the first one a kick he ran in the direction of the girl, who, with Tucu, had been watching him with amazement.

"Keep them covered!" Dick called. "I'll take care of these two. Shoot the first head that bobs up."

Encouraged by the assistance that had so miraculously come to her, the captain's daughter turned more fiercely than ever upon the leader.

"I'll give you ten seconds to get over that rail," she said in a menacing voice. "If you're not gone by that time, I'll kill you like I would a dog."

Black Burley thrust a head above the bulwark. A bullet buried itself in the woodwork so near that he dropped out of sight again. "One!" began the girl. "Two!"

Tucu growled and showed his teeth; but his eyes were upon Dick, whose interference had aroused him to furious hatred. "I'll cut y'heart out, y'traitor!" he breathed thickly. "Three! Four!" counted the girl.

At the seventh count, Tucu picked himself up, slowly and painfully, and made his way over the side. Dick returned to the disarmed Caribs, and with their own knives as weapons drove them into the sea. When they had disappeared, leaving the deck cleared of all enemies, he hurried to the girl's assistance. She was peering over the side of the schooner to see if the crew were leaving in their boat.

"Keep back!" Dick warned. "They may shoot!"

She nodded and stepped cautiously behind the bulwark for protection. Dick glanced around for some weapon. A loose spar, as heavy as a man, and twenty feet long, attracted his attention. Picking it up, he carried it to the side of the schooner, and with a heave threw it outward so that it just grazed the top of the rail.

It rolled over with a clatter, carrying everything with it. There was a growl and scream below that informed him his ruse had succeeded. In its descent the long spar had knocked three Caribs into the sea, and falling on the lugger's small boat nearly smashed the bottom out of it.

Captain Tucu evidently decided that retreat, until he could reorganize his forces and plan a new attack, was the better part of wisdom. He bellowed a command to his men to pull away from the schooner, and a few moments later Dick and Captain Bedford's daughter saw the boat returning to the lugger.

They remained motionless and silent watching until the boat had drawn off beyond pistol shot. Then, as if drawn by common impulse, they turned and gazed at each other.

The girl was quiet and sober, her eyes regarding him inquiringly, almost suspiciously. There was no hint of a smile on her face. The events had tested her courage to the breaking point, and the strain was apparent in the fine lines drawn around the lips and in the heavy circles under her eyes.

Tucu Will Return, Dick Predicts

"We've got rid of them for a time," Dick said, glancing in the direction of the lugger, "but they'll return."

She nodded, following his eyes; then turning to him again, she asked: "Were you with them?"

"Yes," he admitted, "but not of them."

She frowned and raised her eyes inquiringly. "They picked me up a few hours ago," he explained. "I was about dead—been in the water for four days and nights. When they rescued me," he added, smiling at the recollection of it, "I wasn't in a mood to inquire for credentials. I was glad to get any help. Later I found out what they were."

"What are they?" she asked quietly.

"Carib fishermen, beachcombers, sea scavengers, pirates—almost anything and everything."

"I see," she murmured thoughtfully. "Then you think they want to steal this schooner?"

"They took it for an abandoned derelict at first," he replied truthfully, "and, of course, as such it was their legitimate prize. They were surprised and disappointed when they saw you and your father aboard it."

"I can understand that," she replied, "but when—when I ordered them away, they didn't act as if—if—" She stopped and frowned again. "But you said they were sea scavengers and pirates," she added, nodding. "I suppose that means they intend to take the schooner anyway, lawfully or unlawfully."

"I'm afraid so. Captain Tucu, I imagine, isn't the kind to be easily discouraged. If he's decided the schooner's worth it he'll return later. Besides," soberly, "he has another reason for making a second attempt."

"What is that?" she asked. He laughed and shrugged his shoulders. "For one thing he'll want to get even with me for interfering, and second to get hold of those jewels I told him about."

C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Need of Medical Personnel

More than 500 doctors and 300 dentists with 2,500 nurses have been added to the staffs of Veterans' hospitals during the past few months under a recruitment program which takes doctors and nurses from under civil service regulations and offers them more attractive employment opportunities.

This makes a total of 3,112 doctors, 545 dentists and 7,623 nurses now on duty under the Veterans' administration medical program in the department of medicine and surgery as set up by Dr. Paul R. Hawley, chief medical director.

The immediate need for dentists in VA hospitals has been met by the recruitment program but there is still need for physicians and nurses especially in neuropsychiatric and tuberculosis hospitals in the south, midwest and far west.

Questions and Answers

Q. I am a veteran of World War I. Would it be possible for me to get a cash surrender on my service insurance policy?—A. R. D., Pasadena, Calif.

A. The Veterans' administration says that upon proper execution and filing of cash surrender value of U. S. government life insurance and the return of the policy certificate to the Veterans' administration you will receive whatever cash surrender value may be payable.

Q. How much can one of those Veterans' administration appraisers charge a veteran for appraising a house the veteran wants to purchase with his G.I. loan?—J. H. A., Seattle.

A. There is no set amount. In some instances the banks do not make this charge, but appraisers appointed by the Veterans' administration may charge whatever fee is customary in your area. The average fee is something like $15.

Q. While I was in the navy I purchased bonds through deductions from my pay, but to this day I have never received the bonds. Can I do anything about it?—E. C., Yonkers, N. Y.

A. Write to War Bond office, Central Field Fiscal office, 4300 Goodfellow Blvd., St. Louis, Mo. Be sure and give your full name, serial number and the pay periods for which the bonds are due. Also give your correct home address.

Q. It seems to me veterans' disability pensions are too low. How do they compare in this country with other countries?—Mrs. S. R., Denver, Colo.

A. The United States pays higher pensions to disabled veterans than any other country. In England, Australia, Canada and New Zealand pension payments vary according to the number of dependents and the rank of the disabled veteran.

Q. I am drawing the readjustment allowance for self-employed veterans. If I don't draw the full $100 each month for the 10½ months is the balance available to me after the period is up?—Jackson, Miss.

A. No. No matter how small an amount you draw each month, that is considered a full month's payment.

Q. My son has a bad-conduct discharge. He is a veteran of World War II. Is he entitled to any benefits under the G.I. bill?—Mrs. J. H., Hartford City, Ind.

A. He may be, but since he holds neither an honorable nor a dishonorable discharge, it would be necessary for him to contact his nearest Veterans' administration office for a decision as to whether he was discharged under conditions other than honorable. He has a right also to apply to his service for a revision of his discharge.

Q. I was retired from the service with retirement pay for a service-connected disability. I get $125 a month. Am I eligible for any payment from the Veterans' administration for on-the-job training? Will I lose my retirement pay if I sign up for such training?—A. R. S., Oakland, Calif.

A. No, I don't think so. You can take on-the-job training and draw the regular subsistence allowance, plus what the company for which you are working will pay you, plus your retirement pay. Suggest, however, you check with your regional Veterans' administration office.

Q. Can a member of the armed services retire on a medical pension after serving 20 years in the army and still get retirement pay?—Mrs. K. L., Anadarko, Okla.

A. The army says no. But the soldier might be able to draw a service-connected disability pension from the Veterans' administration.

Q. I have an honorable discharge from the WAVES. Am I entitled to my old job?—L. S., Sikeston, Mo.

A. Yes, provided you are qualified and make application for reinstatement.

Study Chinese Family Trees

Sons Get a Long Mention In Records, Daughters Mostly Ignored.

WASHINGTON. — The Chinese do not worship their ancestors but revere the memory of notable ones, and some of their genealogies go back scores of years, reports the New York Times.

Milton Rubicam, president of the National Genealogical society, writes in China Monthly of a study of 100 Chinese genealogies in the library of congress. The oldest is that of the Pi family of Hsin-an. Published in 17 volumes in 1509, it covers 31 generations dating from A. D. 685.

"In the genealogical portion of the work," Mr. Rubicam writes, "was given the name of each person, his pen-name, degree received from an examination, official titles, dates of birth and death, name of his wife, place of burial, number of sons and names of the sons. Unlike western genealogies, the Pi record did not name the daughters of the family, although especial honor was paid to the women who married into the family and who, by their deportment, showed loyalty to their husbands and to the house of Pi.

Family Regulations.

The numerous family regulations, which were described in detail, provided that if the wives of the members of the Pi family were of noble extraction their last names and dates of birth should be stated. If the wives' fathers held official positions the fathers' names and offices should be mentioned. But if the wives were not fortunate enough to be descended from noble families they should be mentioned but no further data about them should be supplied.

"The insistence upon moral virtue was carried to an extraordinary degree, according to our western notions.

"The second oldest Chinese genealogy in the library of congress collection was published in 1535. It relates the story of the Wang family for 81 generations, extending back to the Chun-chiu period (about 1091 B. C.)

Among the more modern genealogies consulted at the library by Mr. Rubicam, one concerns the Chang family and was published in eight volumes in 1870. It goes back 25 generations.

"Not the least important features of the Chang genealogy," Dr. Rubicam says, "are the discussions of the clan and family doctrines, so important for the welfare and the happiness of the individual and his immediate circle of friends and relatives. The 12 clan doctrines may be briefly summarized as follows:

Clan Doctrines.

"1. Respect toward ancestors. Ancestors should be respected in a very humble manner.

"2. Respect toward parents. The utmost care must be taken of one's parents, who should be provided with food and clothing and whose house must be kept in repair.

"3. Relations between husband and wife. Everything must be in harmony.

"4. Relations between brothers. Brothers should be affectionate toward each other and they should not permit their fraternal feelings to be disrupted by their wives or their friends.

"5. Training of sons. Morality is of primary importance.

"6. Selection of friends. Do not select friends who are interested only in drinking and eating. One should be willing to assist one's friends in time of distress.

"7. Marriage rules. One should be careful to choose a wife from a good, moral family.

"8. Relations of the family to society. Private affairs must not be made known to the public.

"9. Sobriety. Do not drink or gamble.

"10. Avoidance of lawsuits. Do not become involved in court actions.

"11. Industry. One must have an occupation.

"12. Personal relations with other people. One must not commit acts harmful to other people. Do not become greedy for property. Do not commit adultery."

Nazis Still Busy At Hitler's Game

Hitler Followers Continue To Spread Propaganda.

FRANKFURT, GERMANY.—One way or another, followers of Hitler still play a not-too-dangerous game of ridiculing the American occupation power and trying to win Germans back to the Fuehrer's philosophy.

Though German night clubs—noticeably those which cater to curious Americans—nowadays find it "profitable" to caricature Adolf in little skits, Hitler's postwar agents occasionally inject dramatic anti-Allied propaganda, in strictly German movie houses.

For instance, an official U. S. army report relates occasional efforts to cast doubt on Allied-made films designed to show Germans the horrors of Gestapo Chief Himmler's murder factories.

In Erlangen recently, a concentration camp movie was shown in the local cinema. There was a scene of men filling in a mass grave.

The army report said:

"Suddenly a patron gets up excitedly and says aloud to his wife so that the whole audience can hear. 'That's me there filling in that grave. They were not concentration camp victims, but victims of an air-raid attack on Nuernberg which I helped bury.'

"Exclaiming, 'Such a swindle,' he leaves the cinema with his wife. Half the audience follows him."

That is how it is done. The army doesn't take this sort of anti-Allied propaganda too seriously, because it takes time to combat years of Nazi indoctrination.

Atomic Rays Go Step

Beyond Microscope

WASHINGTON. — Taking up where x-rays and microscopes leave off, by-products of the atomic bomb promise to answer more of the secrets of life.

Maj. Gen. Norman T. Kirk, the army's surgeon general, made this forecast in commenting on plans to make available to medical researchers relatively large amounts of radio-active isotopes from the uranium piles of the Manhattan atom bomb project.

Kirk said that elements such as calcium, phosphorus, sulphur, iron and a score of others can be "tagged" with small amounts of the isotopes and then followed through the body by means of their emission of beta and gamma radiation.

The latter is the same as x-radiation.

"Medical scientists would like to know more about how calcium and phosphorus are used in building teeth and in uniting fractures, how iodine is used by the thyroid gland, exactly what happens when one or more of the glands of internal secretion start malfunctioning, how the process of wound-healing is carried out," Kirk said.

"Such questions and hundreds of others whose answers are now among the secrets of life wait upon radio-active isotopes for clarification."

Mother of Four Found

Shot to Death in Auto

WOODBIDGE, N. J.—The slacks clad body of an estranged mother of four, her head torn by two heavy caliber bullets, was found recently slumped in the front seat of a sedan parked in a lonely woodland road near Blair road.

She was identified by Assistant Middlesex County Prosecutor James S. Wight as Mrs. Catherine Scuttieri, 33, who, Wight said, had been living in an apartment in Rahway.

She had been separated from her husband, Joseph, for six months, Wight said. The couple had four children: Carman, 14; Doris, 12; Patricia, 10, and Eleanor, 4, living with their father. Police were seeking for questioning the owner of the sedan.

Merchandise

By GEORGE S. BENSON
 President of Harding College
 Searcy, Arkansas

WHEN just about everybody has spending money in their pockets because they can't find enough of the things they want to buy, that is where inflation begins. The results are quite natural. Automatically people start bidding against each other for such items as they do find, and prices advance far beyond real values. Then, no matter what we buy, we are squandering money.

In order to cure inflation we need more things to buy. That's all it takes. If I need a hat and can find only one that fits my head and suits my taste, the dealer can (unless restrained by law) charge me whatever he wishes. I may rebel at the price but somebody else will pay it and the merchant will not need to worry about me. What will set the matter straight? More hats!

Flexing WHEN suitable hats Prices are offered by every haberdasher in town, some competitor is certain to lower his prices to increase sales. Another will try to outdo him, and this competition continues until falling prices get too near cost to go lower. It is that simple. Goods are the scare-crows that frighten away inflation. Whatever interferes with the production of merchandise only makes inflation worse.

Inflation is like hunger. It is a want that has the full force of a need. Hunger includes a craving that throws a person's sense of values completely out of plumb. Food is the only satisfactory answer to the hunger question

A few women in Tinley Park have responded during the summer months for knitting but now we must appeal for more knitters.

Help is needed to speed up the completion of some 3400 children's sweaters for war relief by the end of September.

The yarns are bright colors and light for summer knitting and you have six weeks for knitting the sweaters. The Red Cross has also had urgent calls from Veteran's and Military hospitals for help in making certain surgical dressings and appliances, they never seem to have enough applicators.

These applicators are easy to make and for workers who would rather not do precision work such as we did during the war, this would surely appeal to you.

School For The Small Blind Children

The State Office of Public Instruction, the Department of Public Welfare, and the Commission for Handicapped Children are attempting to plan an institute for the mothers of preschool blind children. The purpose of such an institute would be of instruct each mother in how to give the small blind child the training which it is highly important for him to have in his home in order to prepare him for school attendance when he reaches the proper age.

The Institute would be held at the State School for the Blind in Jacksonville for a five day period during the last week in August. Both the mother and the child would attend and live on the campus of the school. The only costs incurred by the family would be the travelling expenses to and from Jacksonville since all other expenses are to be assumed by the sponsoring agencies.

Whether or not such an institute will be held this summer will depend upon whether a sufficiently large number of mothers of pre school blind children will be interested and able to attend.

Mothers of blind children, between the ages of two and five years, should get in touch with Mr. Raymond Dickinson, Superintendent, Division of Visitation of Adult Blind, Department of Public Welfare, 176 W. Adams St., Chicago 3, Ill.

18 Years Old Youths Must Register

Young men reaching the age of 18 years must continue to register on their 18th birthday in order to avoid delinquency, it was announced today by Col. Paul G. Armstrong, Illinois director of selective service. "There has been a growing feeling of late", Col. Armstrong said, "that it is not necessary for a young man to register until he becomes 19 years of age. This is an incorrect assumption, for the selective service law requires that every young man register on his 18th birthday even though he may not become eligible for service until he becomes 19 years old. "Every 18 year old registrant will be kept in an 'unclassified' state until he becomes 19 years of age, at which time he will be required to submit the regular questionnaire. His local board will then classify him on the basis of the evidence submitted.

"It is very necessary for every young man to go to the area local board office on the day he becomes 18 years of age and there register for selective service. Failure to comply with this rule subjects him to possible federal prosecution. Where a birthday occurs on a Saturday or Sunday, the registration may be accomplished on the following Monday."

Issued Warning For Septic Tank Cleaning

A warning regarding the necessity for periodic cleaning of septic tanks was issued by Dr. E. A. Piszczek, Director, Cook County Department of Public Health. Many owners of homes in rural areas dependent upon septic tanks and sub-surface seepage systems for disposal of sewage are unaware of the fact that septic tanks need to be cleaned.

The action which takes place in a septic tank can only reduce the volume of the material which settles down to the bottom of the tank or which floats to the surface. When there is no longer room in the septic tank for more solids they are forced out into the seepage tiles. When this occurs the sewage breaks out onto the surface of the ground or causes backing up of the entire system. The septic tank should be inspected every summer and when the top scum and bottom sludge add up to twenty inches, the tank should be cleaned. The material from the tank should be placed on a field and plowed under or buried directly.

Under no circumstances should it be dumped in a ditch or stream.

Dr. Piszczek pointed out the danger against discharging the outflow contains disease bearing organisms.

The Sanitary Engineers of the Cook County Department of Public Health can furnish information in connection with sewage disposal problems.

EXTENDS RURAL SERVICE

A total of 1,472 farms and other rural establishments were connected to rural power lines of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois during the first six months of 1946, it was announced today by Britton I. Budd, President. This was 372 more than were added in the full year of 1945.

The utility's accelerated rural electrification program resulted in electricity being available to 28,441 of the 30,883 farm units in the company's service area as of June 30, he said.

Another 1,380 farmers have contracted with the company for electric service, and power lines are being built to reach them as rapidly as possible. Barring manpower or material shortages, Budd said he expects these will be receiving electric service by the end of the year.

"This means that 29,821 or 96.6 per cent. of all rural establishments across the company's 6,200 square mile territory now either have electric service available or have contracted for it," Budd said. "Our goal is to bring this up to 100 percent just as rapidly as possible."

During the first six months of the year, Public Service built 471 miles of new rural power lines, increasing the total miles in service to 7,004. Another 190 miles were under construction as of June 30, while construction was expected to start soon on 825 additional miles of line, Budd reported.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, July 28, was:

"TRUTH"

The Golden Text was:

"Into thine hand I commit my spirit; thou hast redeemed me, O Lord God of truth" (Ps. 31: 5).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible:

"Now when Jesus was risen early the first day of the week, he appeared first to Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had cast seven devils. . . . Afterward he appeared unto the eleven as they sat at meat. . . . And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. . . . And these signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; They shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover" (Mark 16: 9, 14, 15, 17, 18).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:

"The best sermon ever preached is Truth practiced and demonstrated by the destruction of sin, sickness, and death. . . . Truth is affirmative, and confers harmony. All metaphysical logic is inspired by this simple rule of Truth, which governs all reality. . . . The thunder of Sinai and the Sermon on the Mount are pursuing and will overtake the ages, rebuking in their course all error and proclaiming the kingdom of heaven on earth. Truth is revealed. It needs only to be practised" (pp. 201, 418, 174).

ORLAND PARK

ORLAND PUBLIC AND HIGH SCHOOLS HAVE GOOD FACULTY

Our appeal in the Orland Park Herald for housing for teachers, has met with a very fine community response. We have secured one house, one apartment for women teachers and another home has offered board and room for one teacher.

One of our strongest candidates for the music position is a man with wife and two small children. He cannot accept our offer of course unless we can obtain living quarters for him. He would undoubtedly be an asset to our community if we can obtain him. If you know of a possible opening please contact me immediately. We shall also need another place or two for light housekeeping or board and room.

Mr. Wm. S. Brown who will be our science teacher has had his training at State Teachers College, Pennsylvania; the University of Maine and the University of Iowa where he has completed half his work toward his master's degree.

He had taught in both Pennsylvania and Illinois before his induction in the Navy in 1942. He received his discharge in February of this year with the rank of Lieutenant. He has rented the James Parker residence and expects to move to Orland about the middle of August with his wife and three year old son.

Miss Virginia Smith of New Milford, Ohio will teach English III and IV and World and American history. Miss Smith received her bachelor's degree from Akron University, Akron, Ohio in 1943. She did her Cadet teaching at Bushtel High in Akron, and has taught

Road Surfaces

While 83 per cent of the 563,520 miles of state-controlled highways were surfaced, only 73 per cent of the 304,000 miles of municipal streets and alleys and 49 per cent of the 1,928,000 miles of county and local roads have all-weather treatment. By surfacing is meant construction of concrete, asphalt and tar coating, gravel or stabilized earth.

GET RID OF THE WEEDS!

Pointing out that there is no statute authorizing the state department of agriculture to act in controlling weeds, Arnold P. Benson, state director of agriculture, declared that present Illinois laws give town boards, county commissioners and city and village officials authority and responsibility in the matter of eradicating weeds.

Roxy Theatre

A hatful of fun and a heartful of romance are to be seen in "Breakfast in Hollywood", with Tom Breneman and Bonita Grenville which will open at the Roxy theatre at Lockport Sunday for three days.

It is a morning, noon and nightful of Hollywood glamour, uproarious with hilarity and glorious with music and song. For the first time radio's greatest daytime program is brought to the silver screen with a feast of fun, a romantic treat and general entertainment that cannot be beat. Spike Jones and his City Slickers furnishes the musical backdrop for the theme, along with the King Cole Trio.

"Getting Gertie's Garter", with Dennis O'Keefe and Marie McDonald, will be the featured attraction at the Roxy theatre Wednesday and Thursday.

one year in Richfield, Ohio high school. She served as head teacher in social service work in the Cleveland public schools in 1944. Miss Smith has been attending the University of Chicago the past year where she has completed all the work for the master's degree except the thesis. She will commute from Oak Lawn where she will be living in September.

For Meals of Distinction Serve Your Own Homemade Jelly

Home made jelly adds distinction to any meal. Good jelly is made by cooking the correct amount of sugar with the juice of any full flavored fruit. Many juices can be used as is, but some require the addition of fruit acid or a solidifying agent called pectin and others need both acid and pectin.

Tart apples, blackberries, dewberries, cranberries, currants, gooseberries, grapes, sour plums, sour oranges, usually have enough of both acid and pectin for making jelly. Apricots, cherries, peaches, raspberries, pears, strawberries usually lack either or both acid and pectin, but make excellent jelly when combined with an equal amount of tart apple jelly juice or with commercial pectin. If pectin is used, the instructions supplied with it must be followed.

It is a good plan to can unsweetened fruit juice and make it into jelly as needed, because freshly made jelly has a much better flavor than that which has stood several months.

We are indebted to Gladys Kimbrough, Home Service Director for Ball Brothers Company, manufacturer of fruit jars, for a few notes which should be helpful to those who have not already mastered the art of making jelly or superior quality.

JELLY NOTES

For natural jelly "like mother used to make," use fruits which under normal conditions contain enough pectin and acid to yield a good jelly.

For unusual jellies, combine the juices of such fruit as red cherries, strawberries, or apricots with an equal amount of apple juice or with a good commercial pectin.

Fruit should be hard-ripe for jelly making. Under-ripe fruit lacks flavor, that which is "cream and sugar" ripe won't jell; however, some persons prefer to use half under-ripe and half fully ripe fruit.

Cook fruits until soft but not mushy to extract the juice. Cooking is necessary in order to extract the pectin from the pulp. Cut apples in small pieces, skin, core and all. Crush small fruits before cooking.

Remove grapes from stems and caps from berries to prevent off-flavor.

The amount of water to add to fruits for cooking varies. Apples require enough to cover. Most juicy fruits need just enough to prevent sticking; however, a few, cranberries, for example, require more.

If you have no jelly stand and bag, tie two thicknesses of cheese cloth over the top of a deep enamelware kettle of a clean dish pan. Pour the hot fruit on the cloth and let drip free of juice. (The fruit from which the juice has drained may be put through a colander and used for making butter or jam.)

Don't make the mistake of using too much sugar. The general rule is three cups to one quart of juice, but currants and green gooseberries usually work out better if three and a half to four cups of sugar are used to each quart of juice.

Cane and beet sugar are equally satisfactory for making jelly.

One-fourth of the granulated sugar called for in a recipe may be replaced with corn sirup.

Sugar crystals are likely to form in jelly if: (1) it is cooked too long, (2) too much sugar is used, (3) there is not enough acid in the juice, (4) it is left standing unsealed.

The needle shape crystals in grape jelly are caused by the tartaric acid in the grapes. These crystals seldom form in jelly made from unsweetened canned juice. Canned juice should be strained before using. Jelly made from fresh grape juice is less likely to contain crystals if the juice is left in the refrigerator for 24 hours before using. It should be strained to remove any crystals which may form in it.

Gummy jelly is usually caused by overcooking or by long slow cooking.

Jelly may be cloudy if: (1) the juice is not carefully strained, (2) under-ripe fruit is used, (3) allowed to cool too much before pouring into glasses, (4) sauce pan is held high above the glass when the jelly is poured (this traps in air bubbles).

Jellies may "weep" if: (1) not cooked enough, (2) glasses are filled too full, (3) glass not clean above the paraffin, (4) paraffin more than one-eighth inch thick or does not touch sides of glasses.

Use regular jelly glasses as they are the right size and shape.

Boil jelly glasses 20 minutes to sterilize—then drain dry.

Cook jelly rapidly and in small batches, not more than two quarts at a time.

Jelly must be cooked to the finish point. That's when it sheets from a metal spoon. This happens when instead of leaving the side of a tilted spoon in a stream, the last of the sirup divides into two large drops which meet and then slide off the spoon together.

Leave at least one-fourth inch space at the top when filling jelly glasses. Do not spill or splash jelly on the inside rim of the glass.

Use a sterilized spoon to remove bubbles or scum from jelly before it is covered with melted paraffin.

When covering with melted paraffin, turn the jelly glass in the hand so that the paraffin will touch the sides of the glass all the way around. Never use paraffin more than once.

Cover jelly with metal lids and store in a dry place. Dampness causes spoilage.

Haphazard methods yield haphazard results whereas following reliable instructions gives reliable results in form of excellent jelly.

Strike --- At Whom?

By GEORGE S. BENSON
President of Harding College
Searcy, Arkansas

LATE IN MAY it was my good fortune to have with me an annual report of one of America's largest corporations while I spent three hours on a day train. In the back of my mind, as I rode along, was a lurking fear that I might reach home a day (maybe a week) late because of labor troubles, just then coiling to strike. My dread threw a bright light on the figures in hand.

The company about which I was reading plays an important part in the lives of more than a quarter of a million people: 100,000 employees and 150,000 stockholders. Two out of every five of these people drew wages while three out of five received dividends. The average share owner got less than $500 a year. The average employee took home more than $2,500 a year.

Who Can DAILY newspapers for Pay It? days had reported threats of strikes in the plants of the firm I was studying, also on the lines of the railroad I was riding, and in many other industries. Question: If all the employees of all the companies strike for what they want and get it, who will pay the difference? How will they pay it? These questions have answers and they're not secrets.

The train stopped for a few minutes under the sheds of a big town station and a railway newsboy came through with fresh afternoon papers. On page one, under Washington date-line, a wire story told how OPA would grant higher prices on automobiles. Nearby was another item about a 10% boost in shoe prices. Then I remembered that bread and milk and meat had gone up recently.

Strikes PRICE gains catch up Retard with you whether you ride or walk or only eat.

Wages are inside the cost of every manufactured thing, and the consumer pays. It is too obvious to deserve proof. Not long ago officialdom was sounding off freely about how wages in Detroit could be boosted without charging higher prices for automobiles but it didn't work out that way. Why?

It is because strikes are not tools. The official theory was right: Wages can go up without boosting prices but production has to be increased if it happens, and strikes don't increase production. Sudden wage increases of 18% to 30% have to come from somewhere, but where? A stockholder drawing $500 a year can't offer much of a boon to a $2,500 wage earner.

Strikes can't take something from the owners of a company that the owners don't get. That leaves nobody to pay the higher wages but Mr. Consumer whose family drives the car, wears the shoes and eats the food. A large majority of consumers are themselves workers. In the absence of increased production, a strike is a boomerang. It hits the consumer who is the worker himself.

Whiskey Bath Listed as Old Cold Remedy

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.—Fantastic remedies suggested for the common cold 60 years ago were described by Dr. Louis C. Jones of State College for Teachers, Albany, in an address here.

"The Albany Times in 1886 suggested that, in the realm of preventive medicine, best thing to ward off a cold was to take a bath in hot whiskey and rock salt twice a year," Jones said.

Referring to less expensive remedies, the speaker pointed out that "it was 'discovered' in Calcoen, N. Y., that if you take the skin of the leaf lard from left side of a pig, put it on your chest and keep it there, you'll be over your cold in no time."

Another remedy mentioned in old legends is to crawl through a double-rooted briar, moving from west to east.

THERE are many details or important items in sport that are beyond all human understanding. And this doesn't only mean horses that run last in one race and then win the next time out. It doesn't mean a Billy Conn, who was a completely fearless in his first Louis meeting, who had been completely fearless through his entire ring career, who was known as dead game and yet appeared to be in terror in the recent heavyweight title fiasco.

C. Keller

Suppose we take up the case of the New York Yankees. I happened to be in the immediate vicinity of the Yankees, the Red Sox and the Tigers for several weeks in Florida this spring.

Everyone figured, and this included Joe McCarthy, Bill Dickey and Larry MacPhail, that the one possible weak spot in the Yankee lineup should be their pitching. Spud Chandler—and then who did they have? Their defensive fielding was an established fact. This part couldn't miss.

What about the Yankee offense? Now you must admit that Joe McCarthy, Larry MacPhail and Bill Dickey are three rather smart operators as far as baseball is concerned. Offense? With Joe DiMaggio, Charlie Keller, Tommy Henrich, Snuffy Stirnweiss, Joe Gordon, Nick Etten, Phil Rizzuto, Johnny Lindell, Bill Johnson, Aaron Robinson, Bill Dickey—here was the last and least worry. The Yankees had their full share of fielding defense. But above all they had something more important—their attack—their offense—their power at the plate.

McCarthy, MacPhail and Dickey all admitted this. Nothing to worry about in the way of a run-making attack. Stirnweiss had led the American league at bat a year ago—.309. DiMaggio was a normal .340 hitter. Etten, Gordon and Henrich were at least .285 hitters. Keller was a .300 hitter. Rizzuto had been a .310 hitter. The team average should have been around .280 or .285.

Mystery of the Yankees

So what happens? Nearing the end of July the team batting average of the Yankees is under .238. They are far below the Athletics and the White Sox. Outside of Charlie Keller they stand with a flock of .233 hitters, taken as an average. Yet most of these players were once dangerous each time they moved to the plate. They were batters to be feared. Today almost any one with a right or a left arm still hanging on can stop them cold.

What has happened to the old-fashioned Yankee attack? Practically every member of the squad is a friend of mine. It isn't a matter of dissipation or lack of determination. They are giving the game all they have.

On a general average they are smart, intelligent, hustling ball players. They feel lower than MacPhail or Bill Dickey feel. Their reputations, which means their living, is at stake. But they can't hit.

You can understand one or two men moving into a batting slump. How can anyone explain practically an entire team taking the soapy chute at bat? There is no longer any question but that the tropical trip to Panama took a heavy toll. Those who went to Panama reported to St. Petersburg early in March in July condition. They were too far ahead of any training schedule. I don't believe this mistake will ever be repeated. Anyway it is only a part of the answer. It can't explain the entire story.

When 11 ball players, who should range somewhere between .280 and .340, drop below .240—experienced, veteran stars who have been through the fire before—you wade right up to your neck in what is technically known as a quandary—whatever a quandary is—trying to find the answer.

Look at the Red Sox!

You can't blame this on war years because in the same spring and summer interim, the Red Sox have placed five hitters among the first ten. The Yankees have had only one hitter—Charlie Keller—among the first 10.

The Yankees have been down slightly lower than the White Sox were in 1906, when they were known as the "Hitless Wonders." But the "Hitless Wonders" had Ed Walsh, Nick Altrock and Doc White who were pitching four and five-hit games.

If any three of the 11 Yankee hitters expected to bat from .280 to .340 had only moved up in the .280 class, many a ball game, now lost, could have been saved. This amazing reversal of form has the usually sane and able Bill Dickey baffled.

Bill, being a veteran who has always used his head, can understand two or three members of a team in a three-months slump. But as he shakes his Arkansas head, he can't quite understand 10 or 11 from one squad forgetting what the old ash furniture means, and how it should be used.

Japs Spent 18 Million on Ineffective Balloon Bombs

The least effectual weapon used in the war was undoubtedly the Japanese balloon bomb, says Collier's. At a cost of 18 million dollars, about 9,000 were launched against the United States, but only 283 were discovered on or even near the North American continent.

Only one caused death, exploding and killing six persons when tampered with by a child in Oregon.

How to Outbluff a Vicious Dog at night!

...as recommended by Lt. Comdr. Willy Necker, Wheeling, Ill.—noted dog trainer and judge at dog shows...and wartime head of U. S. Coast Guard War Dog Training.

1 The fact that 999 dogs out of a thousand are friendly, safe and lovable doesn't alter the fact that occasionally—through mistreatment, neglect or disease—a dog may turn vicious.

2 Such animals are dangerous. Especially at night! If cornered outdoors, at night, turn on your "Eveready" flashlight! Shine it directly at the dog's eyes, to blind and perhaps bewilder him. He may leap at the light, however; so don't hold it in front of you. Hold it at arm's length to the side. Most important...

3 Keep still. It's instinctive with most animals to attack anything that runs away or moves aggressively. If the dog refrains from attacking for a few seconds, you have probably won—but, if not, protect your throat. Use flashlight as club. Shout! If bitten, see a doctor as soon as possible.

4 For bright light, white light, effective light—insist on "Eveready" batteries. Your dealer now has them. Ask for them by name. For "Eveready" batteries have no equals—that's why they're the largest-selling flashlight batteries in the world. Yet their extra light, extra life, cost you nothing extra!

School Patrol Saves Lives

The importance of the school safety patrol was graphically demonstrated by the Chicago Motor Club in the portrayal of comparative figures on child fatalities, adult fatalities and motor vehicle registrations in the city of Chicago from 1915 to 1945.

The school patrol came into existence in 1922. Prior to that date fatalities and motor vehicle registrations were on the increase. Within a few years after the creation of the patrol, child fatalities showed a definite decrease.

Chas. M. Hayes, President of the Motor Club said: "Society owes a great debt to the boys and girls who serve in this organization."

U. S. Needs More Oil

Petroleum has become an ever increasing factor in the economy of the nation. For years we have largely supplied the world with oil as well as being by far the world's largest consumer of petroleum and its products. In 1939 we produced 1,260,000,000 barrels of crude oil, or 61 per cent of the world production. During the war our production rose to 1,700,000,000 barrels.

The unprecedented demand for petroleum during the war has depleted the known reserves and, what is of equal significance, has delayed prospecting for new fields. The known reserves have been estimated as sufficient to supply our needs, at the prewar consumption rates, for 18 to 22 years. In addition to these known and proved reserves, the normal expectancy of discovery may extend our reserves sufficiently to last an additional 25 to 100 years, again at the prewar level of consumption. These additional reserves cannot be found, however, without an intensive search of every possible oil-producing area and with all the modern technological methods at our disposal.

Private initiative has kept us fully supplied with oil in the past. Given the chance, it will continue to do so in the future.

Deformities Grow

Ninety per cent of all potential cripples would never become deformed if they received the right treatment at the right time. Most deformities are not due to a predisposing cause but to neglect of proper measures of prevention and cure.

Mokena Man Writes Interesting Letter Of His Work In Japan

Mrs. Geo. Stermer of Mokena has received a letter from her son, Lester who is stationed in Wakayama, Japan stating that he has been promoted from Sergeant to Staff Sergeant. The letter in part is: "...I received your lovely letter but have been unable to answer until now. We had two conferences this morning already with Educational Officials about schools, lectures etc. It sure keeps a man busy, but I like my work, so it really doesn't matter."

"This coming Sunday I'm going to give a lecture on 'Democratic Education' to approximately 700 parents, teachers and students. Inclosed is a copy of the lecture, it is mostly an outline, but will be on the whole what I'm going to talk about. I'm also teaching English conversation in two different schools. This afternoon the interpreter and I are going over to a primary school, and teach the students how to say 'Hello', 'Good Morning' etc. Its really interesting to note how the children like this English class. Most of them are between the ages of 11 and 13."

"I've been wondering just what to do after I get home, well, for the first couple weeks, I'm not going to do a thing as far as work goes. After that I expect to get a job and at the same time study for college."

"Write soon, your loving son and brother,

Lester

Lester has recently sent home to his parents three pairs Jap sandals, a 300 year old sword; 6 beautiful Japanese hand painted cups and saucers, a hand painted Japanese vase; a statue of Buddha; 8 yards of white silk suggesting it be used for shirts, also 8 yards of blue silk with a pink flower.

Following is a copy of the lecture which S Sergeant Stermer gave as mentioned in the above letter:

DEMOCRATIC EDUCATION

There are a few fundamental principles of Democracy that must be explained first so that you parents will understand what I am talking about later on. The first is this word "freedom", which can be based upon three main subjects namely, Speech, Press and Religion. By freedom of Speech we mean that any man, woman or child regardless of race, creed or color has the right to say what he wishes, to express his own opinion about Governmental affairs, world affairs or any current fact without being afraid of having his head cut off. Freedom of Press gives any man the right to print anything and everything he wishes about world affairs, new inventions or anything else that comes into his mind. By freedom of Religion, we mean that every man has the right to choose any faith whatsoever he wishes.

Before I go any further, it must be brought to your attention that these three fundamentals should not be misinterpreted in such a manner that you have the right to ruin the school property. There is a certain boundary on all these subjects; during certain crucial times such as wars, one is censored as to what to divulge by newspapers, magazines etc.

Co-education I understand, has never been known in Japan past the fourth grade until the Occupation Army arrived. In America, this system is widely used except in Trade, Vocational and Technical schools. From the time the student enters Primary school until he graduates from high school, he is always in close relation with the opposite sex. During the war, there was much child delinquency because of broken up homes etc. In order to remedy this problem, the school and city officials built recreation centers where the teen agers could go and spend their evenings instead of on the streets.

One of the most important associations in America is the "Parent Teachers Association" (PTA). It brings together the parents, teachers and students. They usually have meetings once a month and during this time the parents and teachers discuss problems that have arisen during the month. The parents are informed of all new rules and directives so they in turn can teach their children as well as the teachers. On the whole the close relationship especially in the primary schools, teachers and parents are on a very

Asked to give some ideas as to what schools in America are doing to encourage the Democratic trend.

One thing that the schools are doing that is of great importance is encouraging Self Government by the students. A Mayor or president is elected by all the students in the School by popular vote.

This candidate campaigns just as if he were running for some Governmental office. (Posters, Parties, Lectures). The same is done with the student heads cabinet, secretary, treasurer, vice president. Whenever there is a student problem, the students, as a whole consult with the President and he in turn speaks to the principal of the school. In this manner, the students have the opportunity to show their ability and initiative. This student head is always a senior, (either male or female) so that only one person can obtain this position once while in school. Whenever the school has any entertainment, the student head is always the person who introduces them to the student body and the faculty.

Another subject of great importance in the teaching of democracy is the current events program. Pamphlets and small magazines are published by the Government and distributed to all schools. There is usually no special class, but one or two days a week is set aside in either Civics or English classes during which the students with the aid of their respective teachers discuss different subjects contained in these pamphlets and magazines.

These pamphlets cover such subjects as, political affairs, economic affairs, science, and in general, everything of importance going on in the world.

Extra curricular activities in all the schools of America are a very important subject. The schools, especially secondary have football, basketball, tennis, track and other sports that are played in competition against other schools. There are also numerous clubs and school organizations such as bands, choirs, speech and dramatic clubs, bird clubs and others that are too numerous to mention.

Vacuum Cleaner

To increase the life of your vacuum cleaner, empty the bag after each use. A regular cleaning not only enables a vacuum to "breathe" better but is your guarantee that moths aren't living off your bag. An old bag usually can be renovated and give you several added months of service. When it can't, replace it with a new one.

USED FAT SALVAGE CHIEF HOPE FOR MORE SOAP AND SUPPLIES

World Scarcity of Fats and Oils Means That Kitchen Grease Saving Is Principal Source of Additional Supplies

Hundreds of letters are received every day by the Department of Agriculture and the American Fat Salvage Committee regarding the relation between fat salvage and soap. "It takes a week or even two to save a pound of used cooking grease," these letters say, "and that is a lot of work." "Where," the writers continue in the next line, "is the soap my used fat is making?"

When a housewife turns a pound of used cooking fat over to the meat dealer, she enables industry to make six bars of laundry soap that it otherwise could not make, according to the figures released by Washington experts.

One pound of used fat salvage is enough to help make approximately one large box of packaged laundry soap—the kind that is currently hard to get—or six bars of laundry soap, or about five bars of toilet soap.

Increases Supply

On the basis of these figures, if a housewife turns over to the meat dealer one pound of used cooking fat, she makes for herself two weeks' supply of packaged soap, or five weeks' supply of toilet soap, or eight weeks' supply of laundry soap, it is pointed out by The American Fat Salvage Committee.

Further, if it had not been for fat salvage, consumers would either have gotten thirteen per cent less soap in 1945, or the government would have had to divert food fats to the manufacture of soap. During 1945, the statisticians say, salvaged household fat supplied enough fats to produce approximately half of the toilet bar soap, all of the yellow bar soap, about 25% of the heavy duty packaged laundry soap, or twice as much as was needed to produce the fine fabric packaged soaps.

By-Products Too

All this in addition to the by-products of soap making, that help make paints, printing ink, fabrics, cellophane, electrical appliances, linoleum and hundreds more everyday necessities.

These figures mean that while soap was one of the shortest commodities last year, it would have been practically extinct if it had not been for the used cooking fat salvaged by American housewives. Every time a woman falls to drain used fat from her frying pan, skim soup, render down table scraps and raw fat cut from meat before cooking, she is throwing hard-to-get soap out of the window.

"American women can help themselves get more soap, and help the famine areas of the world get more food fats and oils simply by conserving all fats and oils, turning every drop of used cooking fat over to the meat dealer for four cents a pound," The American Fat Salvage Committee says.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, August 4, was:

"LOVE"

The Golden Text was:

"Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you" (II Cor. 13: 11).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible:

"For thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I even I, will both search my sheep, and seek them out. As a shepherd seeketh out his flock in the day that he is among his sheep that are scattered . . . I will feed my flock, and I will cause them to lie down, saith the Lord God. I will seek that which was lost and bring again that which was driven away, and will bind up that which was broken, and will strengthen that which was sick; And ye my flock, are men, and I am your God, saith the Lord God" (Ezek. 34: 11, 12, 15, 16, 31).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy.

"Divine Love always has met and always will meet every human need . . . Trials are proofs of God's care . . . Each successive stage of experience unfolds new views of divine goodness and love . . . If we pray to God as a corporeal person, this will prevent us from relinquishing the human doubts and fears which attend such a belief, and so we cannot grasp the wonders wrought by infinite, incorporeal Love, to whom all things are possible" (pp. 494, 66, 13).

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our darling daughter and sister, Mary Annette Cooper, who entered Heaven three years ago August 12, 1943.

Three years ago we prayed,
Please dear God, let us keep her
For we love her, oh, so much.

God answered, I love her, too,
I will give her, Life Eternal
In a home, so grand, above
Where she will never know pain or sorrow

And she'll dwell among my best,
That's where little children are,
Then we knew, He wanted, and loved her too

As we gave her up to God.
Her loving

Orland School Registration August 12 and 13

Registration for students attending Orland Community high school will be held Monday and Tuesday August 12 and 13 at the high school. Superintendent J. G. Rogers, has planned the August registration in order to have the schedule set up when school opens in September.

It will also offer an opportunity to determine the desire for elective subjects that may be in demand, that they may be included in the program if possible. For example one call has been made for advanced mathematics. If enough pupils express a desire for the subject it will be included.

The school bus will run the Northeast route of last school year on Monday morning, August 12th. Mr. Fisher, the driver, will leave Orland at the regular time in the morning. All new pupils please contact students who attended last year and come to the nearest travel point of the route.

On Tuesday morning, August 13, Mr. Yunker, the driver of the Southwest route, will leave Orland at the regular time in the morning to cover the other bus schedule. All pupils will be returned as soon as their registration is completed, each morning probably within two hours.

Monday and Tuesday evenings August 12 and 13 from 7 to 9 p.m. other pupils will be registered who find it impossible to come during the mornings.

Subject offerings for the freshmen include several electives: English, general mathematics, algebra, general science, home economics, shop 1, language, and business training. Sophomore subjects are: English, world history, geometry, home economics, music, biology, advanced shop, typing 1 and language. For the Juniors there will be offered: English, advanced mathematics, home economics, typing II, shorthand I, chemistry, bookkeeping, language, sociology, psychology. The subjects for the seniors include: English, U. S. history, home economics, typing, shorthand, chemistry, bookkeeping, language, civics economics, advanced mathematics.
